Aloha Pacific FCU Assists Two High Schools' Graduation Ceremonies

Honolulu – Aloha Pacific Federal Credit Union assisted two graduation ceremonies recently, donating $2,500 to Kaimuki High School and 500 customized face masks to Farrington High School.

“This has been another very difficult year for our young people because of the pandemic,” said Vince Otsuka, president & CEO of Aloha Pacific FCU. “We were happy to help make their commencement ceremonies as special as possible as they go on toward higher education or the working world.

“We are proud to invest in the success of the future generation of Island leaders.”

The donation to Kaimuki High School covered costs such as chair rentals, security personnel, decorations and live streaming expenses.

“Mahalo to Aloha Pacific FCU for their generosity in these challenging times,” said Reid Yoshikawa, Kaimuki vice principal. “Without these funds, our May 22 ceremony might not have been complete and our graduates’ families would not have been able to see their sons and daughters graduate through the live stream.”

The re-usable masks that were donated to Farrington were customized with the Farrington logo, and were worn by the graduates at the May 17 commencement ceremony.

“We have such a sense of community and family, and having those masks with the Farrington logo gave us all such pride, too,” said Alfredo Carganilla, Farrington principal. “We thank Aloha Pacific for supporting our graduates and our community.”
